It was a remake of Dino Crisis 2, released in Japan on the GameCube in 2002. It was also released on the Xbox Live Arcade and PC in 2010 as Dino Crisis: Master Edition. The game is about the destruction of the Earth by the dinosaurs. You are the last human, a child, who has to stop the dinosaurs and save the world from extinction. Re-release: On December 10th, 2011, a PlayStation Network re-release of Dino Crisis was released called Dino Crisis: Return to Dinosaur Island. This included all previously released content from the original PSone Classic release plus the three DLC bonus missions from the Xbox Live Arcade and PC release. In the game, you play as Chris Redfield, a 10 year-old boy, who has to save the world from the danger of the dinosaurs. The game's levels are divided into three chapters, each having three stages. On Stage One, Chris Redfield must stop several large monsters in a warehouse, which he is able to defeat with a baseball bat. The second stage, also on Stage One, involves fighting a giant that is outside of the warehouse. The third stage takes place on the T. rex's home island, where Chris must kill many giant saurians in a lab to save the world. In the two bonus missions from the Xbox Live Arcade and PC release, there is a mission called "More Meat", in which the player must kill twenty more dinosaurs in different locations.
